Constantinople, September 20.

TH E Bashaw who commands the Ottoman Forces in Persia, has written to the Porte, that he has forwarded the Grand Signior's Letter to Ispahan for Miriweys by two Deputies under a Guard of 180 Spahis : But that brave Prince (as the Bashaw styles him) being then at Calwin, the Governor of Ispahan dispatched an Express to acquaint him with that News, whereupon he repaired forthwith to that Capital, and having summoned the Grandees of the Kingdom to meet him the next Day, he harangued them in the following Words, viz.

Faithful and worthy Partakers of the Burden of the Regency,

I T cannot but be fresh in our Memory in what Manner Mars has for a long time past displayed his Standards in Persia ; how much Blood he has spilt, and what Havock and Devastations he has caused amongst us, which our Posterity will feel for a long while to come : It is high time for us now to sheath the Sword, seeing the Grand Signior, our faithful Ally, proposes an Accommodation for me and the Kingdom of Persia, whereby all the Differences with the Czar of Muscovy may be adjusted in a friendly and advantagious Manner. What remains but to tell you, that in my Opinion the States ought to take this Affair into their Consideration, to the End that this Kingdom, formerly so flourishing, may recover its Losses. I doubt not but that my Courage, and the Measures I have entered into for the settling of this Monarchy, will meet with a general Approbation.

Whereupon the whole Assembly cried out, Long live Miriweys ; and desired that Protector to return the Grand Signior their Thanks in a Letter for his good Disposition towards them. The Bashaw adds, that pursuant to the Porte's Orders he had quartered his Troops in Georgia and Diarbekk, and that he waits now for new Orders about the Disposition of those Troops which were still in Farsistan and Charistan.

Since the opening of the Dyst, the Chamber of Nuncios have took no Resolution upon the Affairs that are in Debate, and the several Meetings are spent in useless Cavile without doing any thing. The greatest Part of the Nuncios persist in their Pretension, that before any thing else be entered upon, they should regulate the Command of the foreign Troops, and the Affairs of Ostrog and Thorn : They pretend, that conform to the Instructions they have received from their Palatinates, they cannot deliberate upon any Affair till those three Points are adjusted. Whereupon the Primate of the Kingdom, the Bishop of Cracow, the Marshal of the Dyst, and the King's Ministers, do their utmost Endeavours to remove those Difficulties, which create so many Divisions in the Chamber of Nuncios. In the Conference they held on the 18th in the King's Presence upon the Command of the foreign Troops, it was resolved, that the Instrument of the Resignation of those Troops should be put into the Hands of the Crown-General ; but most of the Nuncios not contented with this Resolution, insist still that it belongs to them to regulate whatever concerns those Troops, although this is within the Province of the King and the Crown-General. They are now busy in removing this new Difficulty. On the 20th instant, the Affair of Thorn was brought before the Assessorial Tribunal of the High Chancellor, to whom the Decision belongs, and not to the Nuncios in particular, nor yet to the whole Dyst, as it has been pretended by those that are not well inclined to the Magistrates of Thorn : But the Secretary of that City having represented, that he had not as yet received Instructions, this Affair was put off to the 26th instant : Meanwhile, the Three Orders of that City have engaged to the Commission to deliver up to Justice those that have been brought in most guilty, among whom there are some of the Magistrates. On the 16th, the King took the Diversion of the Vintage at his Pleasure-House of Mariamont, which is encompassed with Vineyards : His Majesty invited eight Ladies and 16 Gentlemen, who had the Honour to dine with him, and to partake of the Pleasure of gathering the Grapes, during which there was a fine Consort of Vocal and Instrumental Music, with Dancing. In the Evening there was a great Ball at the Primate's House, which lasted till after Midnight. — They write from Saxony, that the Prince Royal and Electoral had received a Cabinet Courier from Warsaw, and that it was still doubtful whether the General Dyst of Poland would be attended with Success. It is added, that the Regiments that are quartered in the Electorate of Saxony have Orders to hold themselves ready to march on the first Warning ; that the new Levies are continued, to the End that every Company of Foot may be augmented with ten Men, and the Horse with six. It is believed that 6000 of those Troops may go into the Emperor's Service when it shall be thought necessary.

As the Affair concerning the Command of the Crown-General is now settled by Count Fleming's Resignation, and as the other Articles under Debate are to be terminated by the Republick, they have begun the Preliminaries of the Dyst ; and the King, — some will have it, will cause the Succession of the Crown to be proposed in Favour of the Prince Royal, and that in his Majesty's Lifetime. The Baggage of Count Weatisslaw, the Emperor's Ambassador Extraordinary, is arrived here, and we expect his Excellency every Moment. We hear from Petersbourg, that 20 Regiments are marching towards the Canal of Latoga, to bring that Work to Perfection.

Vienna, Oct. 21. The new Bishop and Prince of Wurzburg has wrote a very obliging Letter to the Emperor, wherein he represents unto him, that it is against his Will, hat the Chapter has raised him to that Dignity, which some other Person might have deserved better ; and therefore humbly desires his Imperial Majesty to take him into his Protection, as he did his Predecessour. The Count de Wurtembrand, Vice-President of the Aulic Council, is come from Wurzburg, the new Bishop Bishop wherof has made him a Present of a Ring valued at 1000 Rijgdollars, besides 6000 Ducats in Specie. On the 19th we received an Express dispatched from St. Polten, two Leagues from this City, with Advice that Prince Trauton, Knight of the Golden Pheasant, Great Master of the Emperour's Household, &c. died there the same Day between Six and Seven in the Morning, after a long Illness, aged about 66 Years; he is very much regretted by every Body, by Reason of his great Merit and rare Qualities; and his eldest Son, who is a Counsellor of the Council of the Empire, succeeds him in his Titles of Prince and Count, as likewise in the greatest Part of his Estate. There are a great many already who sollicit for his Post of Great Master of the Emperour's Household, but some are of Opinion, that Count Zinsendorff, his Imperial Majesty's great Chamberlain, will carry it from all the Competitors. M. Dalman, Member of the Council of War, is gone with some Deputies of the East India Company, to meet the Envoy of Tripoli, who is coming to this Court, and there is likewise a Detachment of Five from each Company of the Regiment of Bateith, sent to conduct him hither. It is assured, that this Minister is very polite and learned, and that he has been in several Courts of Christendom. His Imperial Majesty is present at all the Conferences that are held upon the Affairs of the present Conjunction, and within this Fortnight no less than 10 Expresses have been dispatch'd. It is assured, that soon after the Return of Baron Kirchner to Ratibon, all the Religious Grievances of the Empire will be adjusted in a friendly Manner. The Emperour, to shew his high Value for the Pope, has made the Duke of Gravina Ursini, one of his Privy Counsellors of State.
